Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 26 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Feeling colder with squally rain and showers.

Today:
A band of squally heavy rain will push eastwards across the region, clearing by the afternoon to leave sunny spells and scattered blustery showers. These showers will be heavy at times and potentially wintry over high ground. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Clear spells with blustery, sometimes wintry, showers continue before conditions become largely clear and dry by dawn. A risk of frost formation for some. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Saturday:
Largely clear and bright to start with patchy cloud thickening from the west during the afternoon. The odd isolated shower may turn heavy during the evening. Feeling chilly. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Murky on Sunday with light rain, drizzle, and wind, although feeling somewhat milder too. Drier and brighter from Monday with winds easing. Feeling very mild by Tuesday with calm winds.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.